MUSKOGEE COUNTRY CLUB IS A SUCCESS

Muskogee club said to a representative of the Missourian in Kansas City Saturday, "the same plans of the Muskogee plans may be carried out in your city. We were fortunate in having a club formed which we could merge into the town and country club. But a number of business men can easily form such a club without having a previous organization. As in any other movement, all that is needed is someone to start something."

ed is someone to start something.

"Our club did not come all at once but has been a steady growth and now we have one of the best golf courses in the state of Oklahoma and a well furnished club house with a caterer to serve lunches and dinners."

"What other clubs have done is essential information to any country club just beginning its career but each town has its own peculiar situation. If a few men, as I have said before, have the initiative and will organize a club, elect officers, secure a site and incorporate, they will find no trouble in securing enough desirable members to make the club a success. A budget of what the club should cost a year can be easily prepared and the club conducted according to business principles. It is a good investment for the club members as well as furnishing them with a place to play golf and enjoy themselves. The improvements placed upon the grounds of any golf club more than doubles its pecuniary value."

"If I was asked for advice in a few words to any town considering a country club, I would merely say, 'start something.' Have something tangible to work on and the other problems may be easily solved as they present themselves."

TELLS OF JEFFERSON CITY CLUB

A. L. Hawkins Describes Plans Used in His Country Organization.

"No one thing has done Jefferson City more good than its country club, and I do not know of anything that would do more toward making Columbia a better town than such an organization," said A. L. Hawkins of Jefferson City while in Columbia Saturday.

"The Jefferson City Country Club was organized in 1911," said Mr. Hawkins. "We started with a hundred charter members. Each man contributed $100, giving us $10,000 to start with. Our clubhouse cost about $4,000. We have about 125 members, and a great many of them are women. The women take as active an interest in the club as the men and hold many of their social functions in the clubhouse."

"Our clubhouse is a two-story affair. On the first floor we have reading-rooms, a dance hall and a dining room. The second floor is used for lockers and showers. We have turned the grill over to a chef. Meals may be had at any time, and the chef also furnishes refreshments at dances and other entertainments. We do not pay him a salary, but allow him to keep anything he can make."

"The annual dues are $24, and this enables us to keep up our golf links and tennis courts. We never have any trouble in paying all our expenses out of this. The club has also added to the value of Jefferson City real estate. Located on the outskirts of the city, we were originally off by ourselves with no residences near us. Now houses are springing up everywhere around us, and we will soon be right in the heart of a residence section."

"One of the greatest advantages of a country club is that it gives a place to entertain visitors. We have visitors from Sedalia, Hannibal, Columbia and many other cities, and the club gives us a place where we can inexpensively show some courtesy to our guests. We find that when a person comes to a town the size of Jefferson City he always brings his golf clubs along and expects to find a country club."

"Our club has been a wonderful success. It not only furnishes a place for the business man to find a little recreation, but gives an opportunity for social events, advertises the city, boosts the real estate value and brings the business men of the city in closer touch with each other. Why we have more excitement and pleasure out of the friendly rivalry at the election of club officers than the college boys gets out of a football game."

"We have been organized only five years, but in those five years the club has done more to boost Jefferson City than any other thing could do in ten. Columbia is an ideal spot for a country club. A club within a mile or two of the town—not so far away that the man without a machine couldn't afford to ride out in a taxi—would be the making of the town. It would stimulate interest in the city, advertise the city, furnish a place to entertain visitors and give dances, a place for the women to hold their social functions and the men to hold business conferences."

The University's Most Representative Organization

Campaign for 1000 Members Begins Tuesday, October 10.

DEAN F. B. MUMFORD OF THE SCHOOL OF AGRICULTURE, SAYS

The Y.M.C.A. is first of all an institution for promoting the religious life of students, but its doors are open to every student enterprise. It has been the most important agency in the University for aiding students to secure profitable employment.

The Young Men's Christian Association has the universal approval of the people of Missouri. Its broad minded policy has commended it to the students and faculty of the University.

THE UNIVERSITY'S MOST REPRESENTATIVE ORGANIZATION.

For 27 years the Y. M. C. A. has made good this title. It has brought faculty members and students together on a common footing. It has fostered the highest interests of the whole University.

Every student in the University has some stimulating ideals of life. The Y. M. C. A. is the only student organization expressly for the purpose of fostering these stimulating ideals.

For this reason the appeal of the Association is universal. For this reason men of every school and class, every state of mind and degree of wealth reach for its influence and make it the center of the largest University fellowship.

J. ACCOLA, A SENIOR IN ENGINEERING, SAYS

Each year that I have come back to the University, I have taken out membership in the Y. M. C. A., and I expect to continue to do so. It has given me privileges and opportunities that I could not have enjoyed in any other organization.
